LONDON, TO-DAY. DURING THE FIRST 11 WEEKS OF THE NATIONAL SAVINGS CAM-PAIGN OVER £80,000,000 HAS BEEN RAISED, WHICH IS NEARLY FOUR TIMES THE ANTICIPATED RATE.

When the voluntary campaign was launched with the creation of the new Savings Certificate and the new Defence Bond it was expected to raise about £100,000,000 in twelve months.

Since the war began 10,000 new savings groups have been formed, bringing the total to more than 50,000. About 75% of these are in offices and factories and new groups are being formed at the rate of 250 daily.

If the groups do their work properly they should ensure that an even larger amount of current savings will be passed to the Government. - British Wireless.

FINNS CAN HOLD INDEFINITELY IE GIVEN AID

(SPECIAL TO "CHINA MAIL")

Haparanda (Finnish-Swedish Border), To-day. PROVIDING THE FINNS get speedy assistance the Mannerheim Line is capable of resisting for weeks, even months, Swedish military observers stated last night.

No less than 500,000 Soviet troops are estimated to be engaged in the operations against the Mannerheim Line, while enormous auantities of war material have been sent to the front from Leningrad. The relatively short front of 100 kilometres has caused the Russian command to hurl all their troops which are attacking continuously regardless of human losses.

In Helsinki, Finnish military quarters admit that the situation is serious, although they say the Finns have actually lost little ground in the Mannerheim Line battle.

It is reported that on the Karelian front the Russians threw into battle all available reserves of troops and tanks, including 70-ton monsters.

BRITONS MAY FIGHT FINLAND

London, To-day. A general license has been granted to British subjects to enlist in the Finnish forces and a license has been granted to a recruiting organisation established in London, declared Capt. O. Peake, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs, in a written reply to a question on the subject in the House of Commons yesterday.

Capt. Peake added that His Majesty's Government had carefully considered the matter in the light of the resolution passed by the Assembly of the League of Nations on December 14 on the subject of provision of assistance to Finland.

It would, in their view, be inconsistent with the spirit of that resolution that British subjects who wished to volunteer for service in Finland should be hindered by the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, seeing that the Act contains the power to grant dispensations.

UNRESTRICTED U-BOAT WAR ON NEUTRAL SHIPS

WASHINGTON ON NAZI SINKINGS THREATS

Washington, To-day. Government quarters, commenting on the German doctrine just announced, state that Uboats could legally sink an American ship forced into a British control port only after it had been ascertained that the vessel's cargo exceeded 50 per cent. of contraband destined for Germany's enemics.

Little concern is shown by the authorities at the statement by a Berlin spokesman defending the sinking of a Dutch vessel and saying that American ships holding the same status would be fair victims.—Reuter.

GERMAN REPLY TO AMERICAS

Berlin, To-day. Germany replied yesterday to the Note sent to all the belligerents as regards the establishment of a 300-mile security zone around the Americas.

The Nazi reply welcomes the desire of the American Republics to maintain strict neutrality, and says the contemplated regulation would represent an amendment of international law.

German warships, the reply says, have observed international regulations and therefore cannot consider that it is different from the other belligerents, for Britain and France have possessions on the American Continent and have ostablished important bases there.

Germany therefore suggests that Britain and France, under the guarantee of the United States, should accept an obligation not to use these possessions and islands as starting l points or bases for military action. — Reuter.

THE NEW NAZI DOCTRINE TO JUSTIFY MURDER

AMSTERDAM, TO-DAY. NEW INSTRUCTIONS, THAT MEAN PITILESS WAR-FARE ON VIRTUALLY ALL NEUTRAL VESSELS, HAVE BEEN SENT TO GERMAN SUBMARINE COMMANDERS, A C C O R D I N G TO NEWS REACHING HERE FROM BERLIN.

The Dutch steamer Burgendijk is believed to have been the first victim of these new measures. She was torpedoed by a Nazi submarine.

The Berlin correspondent of the "Telegraaf," reporting what he was told in the Wilhelmstrasse, formulates TRAFFIC the German standpoint as follows:

"If a neutral ship is homeward bound or bound for a neutral country is taken into a British control port it will be torpedoed if it has contraband on board."

The correspondent believes that the commander of the submarine which sank the Burgendijk could not have acted on his own responsibility, since the action was opposed to all the traditions of the German navy.

BLANK CHEQUE Hence he must have been acting on an instruction amounting to a sort of blank cheque for destruction.

The Germans say that the British must hold up ships and search them at sea instead of taking them to the control point in the Downs.

Dutch ships are thus faced with the prospect of being mercilessly torpedoed without explanation if they enter Britain's sphere of sea control, which, practically speaking, extends over the whole world.

Theoretically, American touching at Gibraltar are liable be torpedoed under the new Nazi rule, and feelings in Holland are particularly bitter that Germany persistently picks out small neutrals for attacks and leaves the big ones alone. -Reuter.

MIRROR OF WORLD OPINION

COUNT CIANO'S SPEECH

The long speech by the Italian Foreign Minister is one of the most important of the war. Its plain statements, its silences, and its hints are all alike significant. In form it is a reasoned statement of Italian policy. It says much more about history than about the future and it springs no surprises. That Italy makes, and will make, her decisions according to her own view of her interests is accepted in this country. Count Clano repeats it; as was to be expected, he adds that Italy's relations with the Axis partner are unchanged and that, having announced her intention at the beginning of the war not to take any initiative, she still does not intend to take any "as things stand." At the same time he left his hearers, both in Italy and elsewhere, to draw their own conclusions from his survey, and they will certainly find it an inspiriting exercise. There are some principal questions they will ask. What does Count Ciano think about the Russo-German Pact, about Germany's (and Anglo-French) policy, and about Russia "on the move?"

The skill of Count Ciano's historical method comes out best regarding Germany's agreement with Russia. He emphasised that Italy and Germany both intervened in Spain, that Italy deeply hated Bolshevism there and that Germany agreed with her; thus it was that the Anti-Comintern Pact was cemented. What, then, were the purpose and value of that pact? Count Clano says:

It possessed the definite political significance of consolidating the anti-Comintern system and of furthering a wider collaboration in every sphere among the Powers which had built up this system. So the Italians (and the Japanese) interpreted the pact. Then Germany went over to Moscow. Count Ciano crossed the t's a little more distinctly when he disclosed that in April-May of this year Italy agreed (with Germany) to a "detente" with Russia in order to neutralise her if war should come. He thought that more than this could not in any case be accomplished because of the "fundamentally hostile attitude which Nazi Germany had always assumed" towards Russia. Count Ciano, like the rest of us, was to have surprises; on the night of August 21 Ribbentrop telephoned to him that he was going to Moscow the next day. On this, as on other famous occasions. Germany seems to have given Italy less notice of her intentions than might have been expexted between partners. But perhaps the passage in the speech that will resound most loudly is Count Ciano's disclosure that the two Governments agreed that had must avoid they war for some years in their own interest. Italy had spent herself heavily in Abyssinia and Spain. She needed three years in which satisfactorily to organise her military, resources;

Germany, so he says, "spoke of four or five years." So, in March of this year,

The German Government agreed with us on the advisability of not raising any question which would be likely to stir up further polemics until the time period referred to had elapsed.

Discouraging reading for Germanywere Germany ever allowed to read-It! As late as August 11-113 Italy proposed that the two Powers should issue a joint declaration that they-held it to be still possibile to settle the Polish question by negotiation. Germany refused—a plain enough confirmation, if any were needed, that she had made up her mind to war. Count Ciano, of course, blames France and Britain for hardening the Polish attitude by giving her their guarantee; he ignores the truth that if the guarantee had not been given Hitler would probably have attacked Poland straightaway. The Balkan question was handled by Count Ciano elusively but with skill. There also Russia may soon be "on the move." What does Italy think about it? She is anxious, he says, for 'order and peace" in the Balkans because "Italy has now become a Balkan Power" and because "it is to that region that Italian policy tends." Italy intimates that she is much interested in the Balkans and must not be ignored.—"Manchester Guardian."

PRELUDE TO UNION?

The social changes impelled by the World War are already being extended by the present war in Europe. These do not necessarily occur in the shape of reforms idealistically inspired. In fact, they are more likely to come in wartime along the route of sheer expediency. Such is the nature of the Anglo-French agreement to pool financial resources, as well as military and industrial, in the joint effort to remove from Europe the threat of German expansionism.

Fixing the relation between the pound and the franc, dispensing with gold shipments between Britain and France, providing for joint financial arrangements with other countries willing to make war loans, the new financial accord between the Allies completes a temporary politico-economic partnership which must have effects far more enduring than a mere war effort. It will affect the man-inthe-street as well as the men in the trenches; if it works well a vast section of public opinion in both countries and in all economic stations will have been educated to the possibilities of international co-operation in a field unfortunately less widely understood when the League of Nations began its political life. — "Christian Science Monitor."

HITLER'S USE OF HIS VICTIMS OF CONQUEST

LONDON, TO-DAY. COMMENTING ON HITLER'S USE OF HIS VICTIMS OF CONQUEST, THE "MANCHESTER GUAR-DIAN" POINTS OUT THAT A YEAR AGO M. COULONDRE, FRENCH AMBASSADOR TO GER-MANY, AT A TIME WHEN HITLER WAS TAK-ING OVER CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, WAS ASKED WHAT WAS THE REAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THIS MOVE.

In a letter on March 19, 1939, he suggested that Hitler wanted to have at his disposal in time of war a great reserve of labour power and that the Czech supply would help fill up war gaps.

TRIBUTES TO MR. P.M. HODGSON

Glowing tributes were paid by both branches of the legal profession at the Supreme Court this morning to the late Mr. Paul Mary Hodgson, who passed away yesterday.

The chief Justice, Sir Atholl Mac-Gregor, who sat with Mr. Justice R. E. Lindsell and Mr. Justice J. A. Fraser, said: Before dealing with the ordinary business of the day, it is only fitting that I should say a few words about the sudden death of Mr. Paul Mary Hodgson, to whom so many of us paid our last tributes and respects at his funeral yesterday evening.

We all knew Mr. Hodgson: knew him well and there is not one of us here, I am sure, who did not love and respect him. He served a long apprenticeship with the law—for 35 years, 33 of which he spent in this EXCHANGES Colony, in private practice, as Acting Crown Solicitor and as legal adviser to a large corporation.

He was a man of unscrupulous honour, a man of the most lovable quality: one whose loss we all feel and shall feel deeply in many days to come. I know it is the wish of everyone that I should publicly express from this Bench on behalf of my brother Judges and myself how way out to this Colony.

"This is how Hitler proposes to re-organize Europe," the paper concludes.

GERMAN TERRORISM

"The Times" comments on German terrorism, which it says aims at eliminating the bravest, most distinguished, most learned and most able of the inhabitants which comes under Hitler's control.

The "News Chronicle" discusses a "curious result" of the evacuation of children from danger areas. evacuation has given town children a taste of, if not for, the country; it has improved health and brought town and country children together.

HOSTILITIES ON LAPLAND FRONT

(By Our Special Correspondent in Finland, Leland Stowe)

Salla Sector, To-day.

FROM THE ENTRENCHED positions just west of the village of Lake Marka the Russian forces shelled steadily last of the Australian "Country night and to-day in an effort to hold up the determined Finnish troops which last week drove them back nearly 25 miles from Lake Juotsi.

The invading Red Army corps has now lost the most important point of penetration attained anywhere by the Russians along the entire eastern front, as a visit to the southern Salla sector has just demonstrated to us.

The hostilities in Lapland now centre around Lake Marka, which is 20 miles south-west of Salla. The struggle for Lake Marka village may be prolonged, and is likely to seesaw back and forth. Whether the Russians will counter-attack or will again be severely punished by the Finnish flanking movements remains unpredictable.

What is vital, however, is the fact This soldier had been on the point of that the Soviets have been compelled throwing it when killed. to sacrifice miles of terrain and also, for the first time in this war, that | Several miles further along the road they have managed to retreat in an to Lake Marka, we came upon a deorderly fashion.

Harried and slashed on both flanks, however, were two Russian graves they withdrew to these fortified lines with shaved stakes serving as tombafter having held advanced posts on Mandivarra Hill-which is northwest of Lake Juotsi and within 15 miles of the key town Kemi on the main indication of rank was given. road which leads to Rovaniemi. On inscriptions written in Russian read their retreat the Reds were punished as follows: "Killed in battle Decemby some of their own guns, which ber 26th, fighting against White Guard the Finns had captured and turned bandits for the freedom of Finland.' against them.

RUSSIAN DEAD

When we rode through Lake Juotsi arrived. hamlet and on towards Lake Marka yesterday, we went through the former Finnish and Russian front lines. We saw farmhouses on the shores of Juotsi which had been torn and splintered by Bolshevist artillery fire. We saw a considerable number of Russian corpses, but no Finnish fallen, since, as is customary, they had been promptly removed. What was most interesting was the total lack of Russian war material, of wrecked tanks, thereby testifying to the Soviet retreat and to the fact that guns and heavy weapons had been sent back. This in no way detracts from an impressive achievement by the Finnish troops against much superior forces. For the first time, however, we had an opportunity to study miles of territory which had previously been held by the Russians, and most of it for nearly a month. What we saw indicated that these invading Russian divisions have had a considerably better leadership than the divisions which were moved from near

Syomussaimi and Lake Tolva. NARROW NO-MAN'S LAND

The Finnish and Russian lines had faced each other with only 300 yards of separation, across an inlet of Lake Juotsi, and the Russian positions had been dug in there. They had built a score of dug-outs thickly covered with pine logs. When they withdrew, they left this terrain heavily mined so that it was not advisable to tramp about at random in three feet of snow. We learned that the Russians had circled Juotsi village to the north and had reached Mandivara Hill, but the Finns with flank attacks forced their wholesale withdrawal last week.

In a farmhouse at the southern end of Juotsi we found a number of Russian dead and more in the adjacent woods and undergrowth. All his clothing except the woollen underwear had been removed from the corpse. On the northern Salla front officers had told us about the Russians removing woollen uniforms from some of the Finnish dead. The man's arms ter. had frozen extended above his head in the position they had taken when his coat and shirt were taken off.

Further on we learned that the Russians are holding a ridge on the outskirts of Lake Marka village while the Finns occupy a hill on the southern side of the road. The Soviets are blazing away with artillery and wasting most of their shells, as they do everywhere. The lines are relatively close and flexible, as they spread out on either side beyond the ridge and the hill. Only small groups of men can move up to or near the Finnish advance posts in these positions. The Finns can often hear the Russians talking or shouting and every shot brings a retaliatory burst of fire. The war along the Lapland front remains open and fluctuating. REAL LIFE DETECTIVE TRIUMPHS

TRAGEDY IN BAVARIA TOURNEY

Holzmann, a prepossessing woman of middle age, lodged for many years in the home of a shoemaker in Augsbury. Bavaria. She was a person of means and it was a source of wonder that such a beautiful representative of the sex had never married.

There were two other lodgers in the house, one a silly sort of fellow named Steiner and the other his friend, an older and more serious man known as Rauschmeir. Steiner was disposed to flirt with Miss Holzmann, but she treated him with indifference. Rauschmeir all but ignored her and whenever they met gave her a sort of grunting salutation.

One day as she was leaving the house the shoemaker-landlord asked her when she would be back and she replied laughingly:

"When I get here."

The woman was never seen alive after that moment. For several weeks the landlord never did or said anything. But shoemakers, like fishermen, are apt to be philosophers. As he sat on his low bench, hour after hour, pegging away at his shoes, he dreamed of more things than occur to the average mortal. One morning he began thinking of Miss Holzmann and he started to put two and two together. He arose from his bench with an exclamation of dismay.

In that moment he had become convinced that the missing woman had met with foul play!

He called on the chief of police of Augsburg and confided his suspicions to that functionary. The officials at headquarters put him through a severe A.V. GOSANO cross-examination. They wanted to know why he had delayed informing WASTED them of the strange disappearance of his lodger. His reply was that, until a few hours before, he had not considered it a case for the police. This was on April 12, 1821, but even at that period detectives had a formula which corresponds to our present third degree.

When it was ended the shoe-makerlandlord was held under arrest as "a material witness."

The detectives hurried to the room formerly occupied by Miss Holzmann and made a careful search. They found nothing of importance. what they did not find was significant. Everything of any value owned by the woman had disappeared. other two lodgers had given up their rooms after the arrest of their landlord and could not be located.

Weeks went by with no developments and finally the landlord was given his liberty. After that things moved rapidly. One day the shoemaker went into a little-used loft of the house to get some linen from the top shelf of a closet and pulled down a gruesome package.

It was part of a human body!

In the course of the next few days other portions were found in various places—some on the roof, some in the chimney and some in a stream near the house. When these horrible fragments had been reassembled they proved to be the remains of Marie foughtly desperately to no avail. Anna Holzmann.

They gathered together a quantity of rings and jewellery, including the brass ring, called Rauschmeir into the room and accused him of stealing the stuff from the dead woman. He denied the charge. He insisted that some of the jewellery belonged to him.

"See here," he exclaimed, picking up the fatal brass-ring, "this is mine. I have owned it for years. See, it fits my finger exactly."

As he spoke he slipped the tell-tale ring on the fourth finger of his left hand. And in doing so he also slipped the noose around his neck. Steiner, arrested soon afterward, made a confession which proved the guilt of Rauschmeir,

INTERPORT FOOTBALL

DEFENCE?

Shanghai, Feb. 9. Shanghai retained the Hong Kong Telegraph Interport Cup at the Canidrome in fine weather before a crowd of 15,000 when the local eleven trounced the Colony footballers by two goals to nil. A stubborn defence and rare opportunism were responsible for the victory. Vincent "Blondy" Roboostoff and Freddie Foyn, the city's two speed merchants, each scored to keep the coveted trophy in the possession of the Shanghai Football Association for at least another twelve months. It was a scrappy game in which neither side was able to combine well as a team. Shanghai showed more aggressiveness and held the upperhand throughout the minutes of play. In the first half the invaders were kept mostly on the defensive and it was only a lack of finish among the local forwards that prevented Shanghai from having a lead of more than one goal at the interval.

Hong Kong played a losing game at the very beginning. It appeared that the visitors had made a big mistake in putting A. V. Gosano, the captain and a very fast raider, at centre-half just to keep a close watch on Roboostoff. The versatile Portuguese star did a remarkable job in the rear, but his absence in the front line was so keenly felt that there was little life

J. Hossack, the centre-forward, put in a lot of hard work, always trying from Messrs. E. H. Williams, H. E. to break his way through. However, he lacked the support of Gosano and will not be playing. INTERPORT RUGBY REPORT

On Thursday, February 8, Hong Kong beat Shanghai by 8 points to 6 In the Rugby Interport in Shanghai. The following is "The North China Daily News" comment on the players: The Hong Kong forwards did very well indeed on a pitch that was against good football, but in the last twenty minutes when the visitors were eight points ahead, they were completely outplayed and Shanghai were unlucky not to have gained the day. There was an element of doubt about Hong Kong's goal, it appearing. to many present that at least three Hong Kong forwards were offside immediately before Redman went over under the posts, while near the end of the game it seemed that Kennedy, the Shanghai centre, scored quite a legitimate try which was not allowed.

The encounter never reached great heights and quite a number of friend-C. M. Stark and Miss Joanna Reeve. ly games have been seen on the Race Course this season that have been far better in quality than this long-

BEAUTIFUL KICKS

Henderson, the stocky Hong Kong J. L. C. Pearce and Miss P. Prit- full-back, gave a great performance to drive back the Shanghai side with Surg. Capt. G. V. Hobbs and Miss beautiful kicks to touch. His catching was clean, his place kicking was good and he played a delightfully cool game in conditions that suited nobody. The winners' threes all did well considering the almost impossible state of the ball, their handling on occasions being a revelation that opened the eyes of all present. Bosanquet, on the right, showed plenty of thrust, his terrific speed and great weight always causing danger to the Shanghai defence whenever he was placed in possession. His try was a beauty and well deserved, the manner in which he rushed past three defenders without the slightest difficulty being the work of a firstclass craftsman.

BIDWELL'S. SPEED

Bidwell and Hutchison did well and the former's quickness led to the second score for Hong Kong. Thomson and Cessford combined well at half while prominent among the D. G. Glenn Allen and Miss Purkis. Hong Kong forwards were Walkden, Salter, Godfrey and Redman.

Dickson, the usually reliable Shanghai full-back, had an off-day. His place and touch kicking were weak while he was often railed when in possession. His tackling and catching were as good as ever but the wet ball and the state of the ground showed him in a light that no one had ever suspected possible. Jimmy Martin, on the left wing, played a splendid defensive game and although he was not in position when Bosan-Capt. D. B. Bird and Miss Mary quet went over, he had no superiors in this part of the match. Kennedy and Thornley played hard.

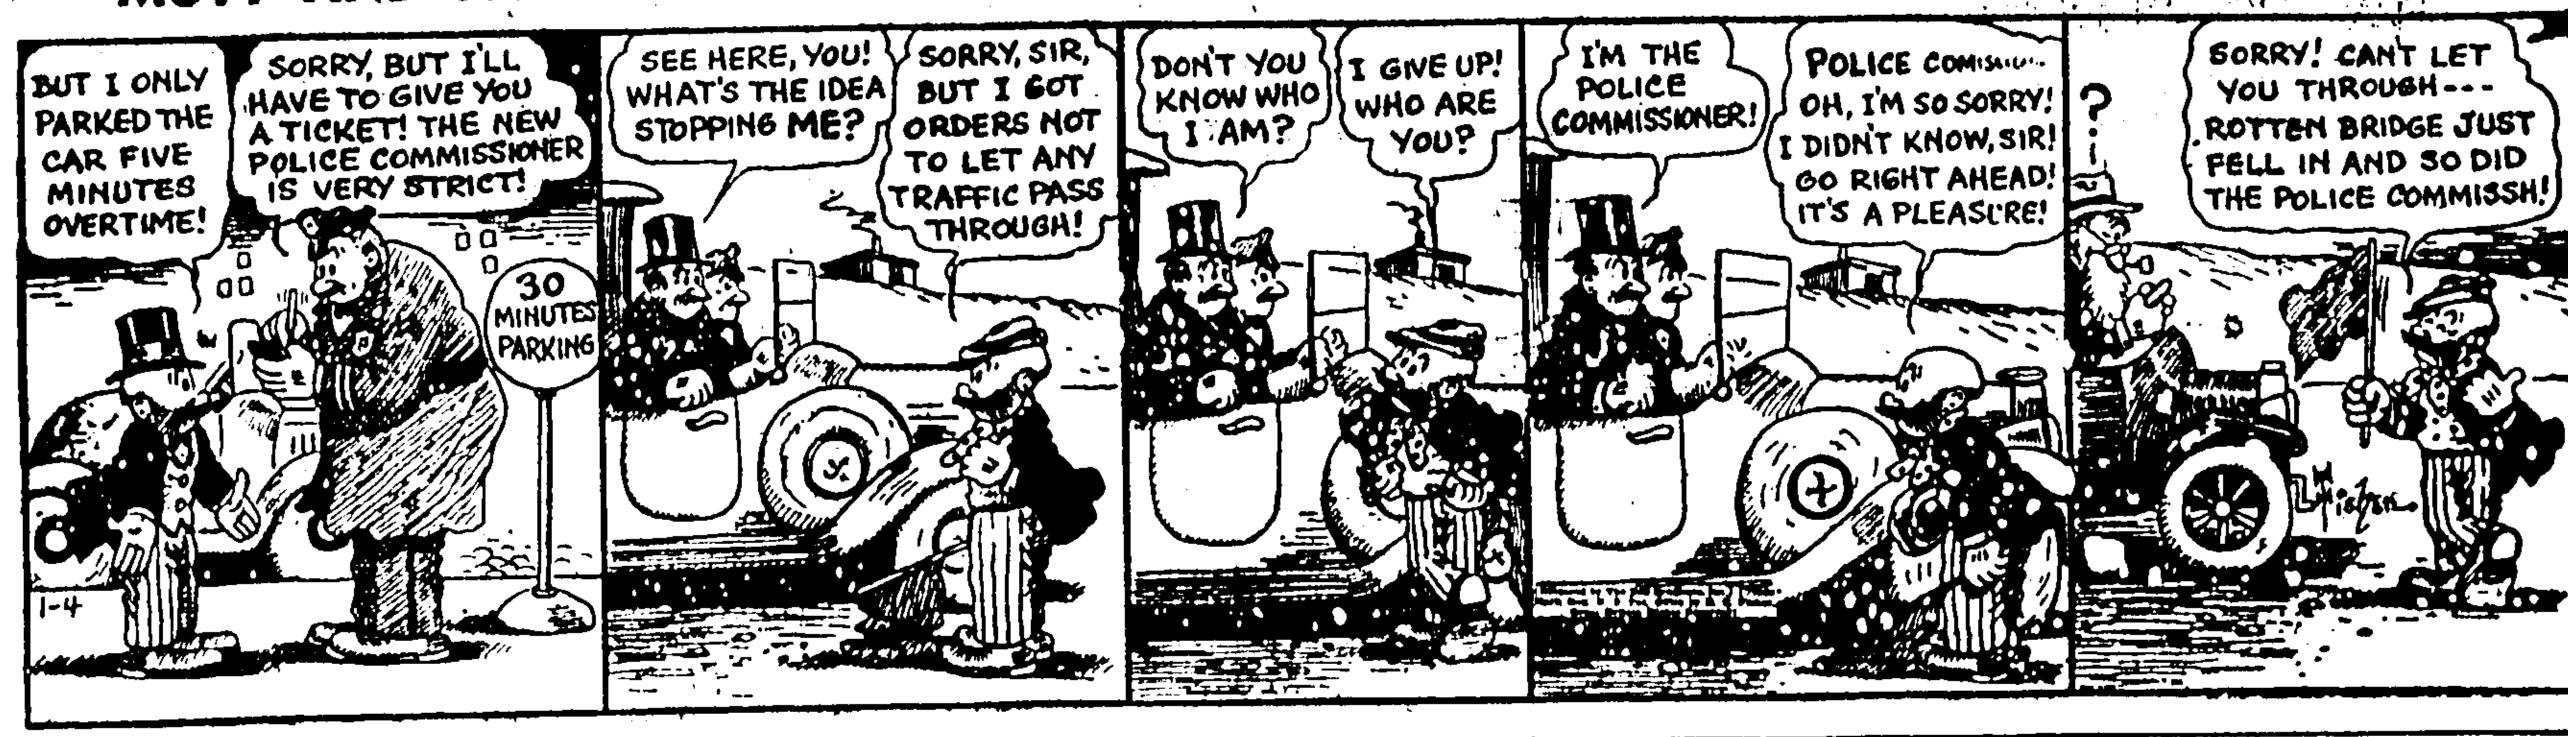

DICKINSON THE BEST

Dickinson was the best of the Shanghai XV. He worked from start to finish like a Trojan and had the better of Thomson in many duels. Of the forwards, who fought as they can only during the last twenty Pay. Lt. J. S. Theobald and Mrs. minutes, R. U. Reynolds. Gammie and Sayle were the best. BARMA HEADS JUNIOR BOWLERS

(By "ADREM")

With only one match played in Senior Division of the League on Saturday, the cricket averages remain materially the same, although E. L. Gosano, who took three cheap wickets, qualifies for the bowling.

thanks to his feat against R.A.F. on Sunday of taking 5 for 14, not only equalifies but advances to the head of the Junior bowling list with the fine average of 5.22 for 9 wickets.

M. R. Abbas, of the same club, also had a very good match on Sunday, scoring 46 runs and taking 5 for 21. He is one of the few cricketers in Second Division who appear in both the batting and bowling lists.

LOSERS' LINE-UP CAUSED DOWNFALL

(By "ADREM")

APPARENTLY TAKING the match too lightly, St. John's, hitherto unbeaten in Junior Division of the Badminton League, lost to St. Andrew's at the Kowloon Church | afternoon, Hong Kong Hoc-Hall last night by the odd game.

Except for Peter Wilson, the losers were at full strength team from Rajputana Rifles but changes in their pairings left them with one unbeatable by 2 goals to 1 in a friendly combination and two pairs, who at best could be described hockey match; all the goals as mediocre.

St. Andrew's took full advantage of their opportunity and although thoroughly extended in several games, their familiarity with conditions and In Junior Division, Y. T. Barma, great fighting qualities carried them through to one of the most sensational victories of the season.

This unexpected result makes this League far more open as St. John's have never looked like losing a match hitherto and greater keenness in at least four other teams can now be expected.
